The Damon home vas beautifully decorated for the occasion. The beautiful drawing-room, where the reception was held, was decorated in white and green. The house represented a Greek collonade: the sillars were vrapped with flowers and front of this collonade, the bride and groom received the congratulations of their friends. The ushers, Messrs. Harold Castle, Dr. Hedemann, Jack Sherwood Lowrey and McKinnon, George Brown, conducted the guests to the young people, where they exressed their good wishes. The decorations at this beautiful home were s: elaborate that they are hard too decribe. The drawing-room was converted into a bower of green; most of the palms used in decorating were from the conservatories of Mr. Samuel Damon, the uncle of the bride. Large bank ing baskets were suspended from the ceiling, while oride's roses were used lavishly as a decoration. Tents were scattered over the beautiful grounds of the Damons, where dainty ments were served. The bride's table
